SPEAKER:

Charles Evans

President & Chief Executive Officer
Federal Reserve Bank of Chicago

Join Charles L. Evans, the President and CEO of the Federal Reserve Bank of Chicago, as he offers his outlook for the economy, explores the potential sources of low inflation, and discusses how recent economic developments impact his views on conducting monetary policy.

Evans has served as president and chief executive officer of the Federal Reserve Bank of Chicago since September 2007. In that capacity, he serves on the Federal Open Market Committee (FOMC), the Federal Reserve System's monetary policymaking body.

Before becoming president, Evans served as director of research and senior vice president, supervising the Bank's research on monetary policy, banking, financial markets and regional economic conditions.

His personal research has focused on measuring the effects of monetary policy on U.S. economic activity, inflation and financial market prices and has been published in peer-reviewed journals.

Evans has taught at the University of Chicago, the University of Michigan and the University of South Carolina. He received a bachelor's degree in economics from the University of Virginia and a doctorate in economics from Carnegie-Mellon University in Pittsburgh.

The Federal Reserve Bank of Chicago is one of 12 regional Reserve Banks across the country. These 12 banks – along with the Board of Governors in Washington, DC – make up our nation's central bank. As head of the Chicago Fed, Evans oversees the work of roughly 1,400 employees in Chicago and Detroit who conduct economic research, supervise financial institutions and provide payment services to commercial banks and the U.S. government.
